

The Animals Game Graphics Sources

Computer Cartoon, Button Art, Choose Animal Pages and Clue Pages

Most art in The Animals Game is original work by Ann Brundige, including all the little computer cartoons, button art, stage background, choose animals chart, and many of the clues, including pouch, bill, hibernate, soft, hibernate, mane, arms, and various legs. Two clues (feathers, flippers) include portions of photos by Ann Brundige.

The photos in the fur and scales clues are from textures.com. Public domain photos, illustrations, or clip art images from Pixabay.com are elements of the clues for South Pole, antlers, eggs, webbed feet, change colors, farm, shell, bones, ocean, fins, hump, hop, and fly, although I changed these up quite a bit in many cases. The art for the Yes and No buttons, and the face of the stop sign on the Stop button, also include public domain clip art images from Pixabay.com.

Art For Animals Pages And Clip Art Collection

Original art by Ann Brundige: Platypus, echidna, camel. I drew these from an old watercolor (platypus), a public domain photo on Pixabay (echidna), and a photograph on Flickr (camel). I also adapted photos into clip art for the earthworm and jellyfish, both public domain photos from Pixabay.

Kangaroo, Wolf, and Zebra are from Wikimedia Commons. These were old, public domain line drawings, cleaned up and donated to Wikimedia Commons by Pearson Scott Foresman. I added color and shading.

Public Domain Clipart (pdclipart.com) The Rabbit and Penguin came from this site, which has all public domain images. The "rabbit" originally was a brown hare, but I remodeled him.

The Animals Game Video Sources

The movie names in this list refer to the original filenames and formats. I converted all of them to .m4v format using iSkysoft Media Converter Deluxe®. In most cases, I used only a short segment from each these videos, especially those from YouTube, which tended to be long.

If you use or share any of these movies, you should include the attribution, as given here. The only exception would be one of the few videos solely from Pixabay.com, such as the one for octopus. In addition, several of the videos contain segments from videos I found on Flickr, that had a non-commercial license as well as a requirement for attribution. That's the license for Annie's Resource Attic and all my resources also.

In the following list, if I mention a combination of videos, it means that the final version used in The Animals Game is a merge of the listed videos. For some animals, there are several separate videos Ex.) Turtle. For those, I numbered the separate videos for that animal, listing for each the original videos I merged together. Simply copy the entire attribution for any of the movies you share or use in a new project.

The Animals Game Sounds Sources

Text sounds are the Mac computer voice Ava, edited considerably in Audacity®. I was able to record the sentences by using the Save Spoken Selection option in Tex Edit Plus® (a shareware notepad-type application). In addition to the Ava voice, I added various hmms and uhs (also edited in Audacity) to the recordings while the computer is asking questions, to give it more personality.

These "thoughty" sounds were all downloaded from Freesound.org, and include:
